17. ABSTRACT (MAX. 250 WORDS)

Shows State tax funds appropriated for operating expenses of institutions of higher education conferring baccalaureate or higher degrees by States and by institutions within States. Also includes some 30 State 2-year colleges and technical institutes, but not local public community-junior colleges. Statewide totals are given for each of the years 1959-60, 1960-61, and 1961-62; itemizations, for 1961-62 only, except in some cases where biennial appropriations for both 1961-62 and 1962-63 are shown.

In terms of percentage of increase, 1961-62 compared to 1959-60, Kentucky and New York increased their appropriations for higher education faster than any other States—64 and 48 percent, respectively.

APPROPRIATIONS OF STATE TAX FUNDS FOR OPERATING EXPENSES OF HIGHER EDUCATION 1961 - 1962

BY M. M. CHAMBERS

JOINT OFFICE OF INSTITUTIONAL RESEARCH
WASHINGTON, D. C. JANUARY 1962

PREFACE

This report, in its second year of publication, attempts to provide data regarding state support for higher education based on appropriations of state tax funds rather than total appropriations.

Total appropriations by state legislatures for higher education are often erroneously interpreted as state tax support for higher education. In many cases total appropriations include income received by the institutions from non-tax sources and reappropriations by state legislatures. Reports issued by federal and other agencies showing gross expenditures for higher education in the various states are misleading since they may include expenditures for dormitories, athletic programs, hospitals and other auxiliary enterprises without showing any offset for revenues produced by such activities.

Users of the data contained in this report should keep in mind that appropriations from state tax sources listed herein may include support not only for instructional programs, but also for research, including agricultural and engineering experiment stations, and a great many public services such as general extension,county agricultural and home demonstration agents, adult education programs, hospitals, and other activities assigned by state legislatures to public institutions of higher education.

As Dr. Chambers indicates in the "Foreward," the data contained in this report are in preliminary form and subject to verification and change. In several of the state tabulations the items may not add up to the indicated total. Minor discrepancies may be attributed to rounding. Where the discrepancies are substantial, the investigator, while reasonably confident of the total, may have encountered difficulty in obtaining from his sources consistent reports of such items as state scholarship programs, expenses of central governing boards, supplementary budget increases or decreases, etc. To check and verify every item would be a costly and time-consuming project which would delay the publication of this report beyond the time when it is most useful. While the tabulations are subject to change, they are believed to be substantially correct and to provide a reasonably accurate picture of state tax funds appropriated.

FOREWORD

The tabulations in this report, covering 50 states, exhibit state appropriations of state tax funds for operating expenses of higher education in institutions conferring the baccalaureate or higher degrees, shown by states and by institutions within states.

Some 30 State two-year colleges and technical institutes are also included; but local public community-junior colleges are not included here, though many of them received state appropriations for a part of their operating expenses, to an aggregate of about $71 million for fiscal year 1961-62.

Wherever possible, appropriations for the fiscal year 1961-62 are used; but in some states where appropriations are biennial, with no stipulated division between the two fiscal years of the biennium, the total biennial appropriation for 1961-63 is shown.

In some states appropriating biennially and sepcifying different sums for each of the two fiscal years of the biennium 1961-63, the sums appropriated for the fiscal year 1962-63 are included in a separate column.

These tabulations are subject to some subsequent verification and rectification, but are believed to be substantially correct. Informed persons who may detect any substantial error will please notify M.M. Chambers, 705 Stoddard Building, Lansing 23, Michigan, who is solely responsible.

The fifty states have appropriated a total of slightly less than one and two-thirds billions for operating expenses of about 400 institutions of higher education for the current fiscal year (1961-62). This sum of one and two-thirds billions represents state tax funds and is not intended to include institutional income from any non-tax sources or from any non-state sources.

The tabulations herein are in preliminary form.
